The post was about B2.1 ab 21.02.2012, here is the answer: Click to see the answer to the question which is referring to the question you tagged. Hope that helps, Mertvig A: See the Answer. Turns out you can't. (But the 'replace' function should work for all such replacements. I don't know enough about the regex engine to know if it will work on all of them) UPDATE: Turns out it does. Also my solution only works on single-word replacements, not multiple-word ones. here is the code I used:

string s = "print '123'"; //Replace all the " " (empty space) in the string "123" with "AB" string newString = Regex.Replace(s, "\ ", "AB"); //Use the result of the replace to replace all occurrences of the string "AB" in the string with " " string newResult = Regex.Replace(newString, "AB", " ");

```
Console.WriteLine("Result of the replace: " + newString); Console.WriteLine("NewResult of the replace: " + newResult); Console.ReadKey();
[Erosive localized pustulosis of Gougerot-Sjögren].

Erosive localized pustulosis is a rare form of pustulosis, characterised by very frequent relapsing periods. The dermatology department of the University Hospital of Marseilles, France, observed this disease over a period of a year. In this report we present the clinical and histologic findings in the lesions of one patient, and compare our findings with those reported by the literature.
