Of 120 patients treated for primary or recurrent herniation of the abdominal wall, 47 per cent were considered suitable for internal ring repair, with the suture mesh and prosthetic material as the only material introduced into the peritoneal cavity. Herniation of the mesh due to failure of the new prosthetic material was seen in 30 per cent of the cases. No perioperative mortality or long-term morbidity was observed. The condition was dealt with by an aggressive policy of reoperation where all possible causes of hernia had been considered. The technique was designed to eliminate the potential for mesh incorporation into the bowel and hernia recurrence.Dmitry V.
